A year ago, my parents, brother, sister, and I, moved out to the family farm. On the farm, we raise Gelbvieh and Balancer cattle. It is hard to think of just one favorite farm experience when I have thousands. My favorite farm experience happened to me just a few days ago.

The day started out like any other day. It was a bright, sunny afternoon. I had gotten home from school and finished my homework and went outside to play. While I was outside playing, my cousin Bailey ran up to me and shouted, "Mallory, I think one of your cows is giving birth!" I felt so excited, but nervous and knew I wanted to see it be born. I was going to ride my bike down to the pasture but knew it would take too long to get through all the gates, so I decided to run as fast as I could to where my Pawpaw was sitting. My Pawpaw was sitting in the ranger. He signaled me to be quiet as I got close to him and the momma cow. I could see the momma cow standing up and sitting down and then standing up again. I could tell she was having a baby. I climbed up the gate to get a better view, when suddenly, the momma cow stood up and there was a black slimy blob on the ground. I yelled, "Pawpaw, I think she had her baby!" Sure enough she had her baby. We went to check on them and I was so excited to find out it was a baby girl.

This was my favorite farm experience. I was so excited to see my first baby cow be born and get to tell everyone about it. I can not wait to make more farm memories as I get older.
